SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

A New $1.5M Sloan Foundation Award Funds Earth Scientist's Deep Energy Research

David R. Cole, Professor and Ohio Research Scholar, School of Earth Sciences, will receive $1.5M from the Sloan Foundation to fund the study of Reduced Carbon in Earth's Crust and Mantle I: Abiogenic versus Biogenic Origins.

Cole will lead a multidisciplinary, multinational team to develop a fundamental understanding of environments and processes that regulate the chemical, mineralogical and isotopic signatures that could be used to clearly differentiate abiogenic from biogenic sources of hydrocarbons. "This is especially important as we seek creative and sustainable solutions to our energy needs going forward," Cole said. "Probing the higher temperature pressure environment of the Earth's deep interior may be the new frontier." Read the full story online.

History Professor Weighs In on HBO Sports Documentary

David Stebenne, professor of history and law, and author of Arthur Goldberg: New Deal Liberal, discusses The Curious Case of Curt Flood, in an HBO Sports documentary that suggests Flood's legal challenge to baseball's reserve clause fizzled because of lazy lawyering by Arthur J. Goldberg, a former associate U.S. Supreme Court justice, who delivered the oral argument against the reserve clause. Read the full story online.
