The Ohio State University Department of African and African American Studies (AAAS) creates and disseminates knowledge and understanding about the peoples of Africa: their artistic productions and economic contribution; their shared and diverse histories, cultures, and languages; and, the impact of race, ethnicity, and gender in the construction of their identities within the United States, Africa and its Diaspora, and globally.

THE COMMUNITY EXTENSION CENTER

AAAS is the only department of black studies in the nation with a free standing extension center. Located in the historic Mount Vernon area in near east Columbus, the Community Extension Center provides community outreach and education programs designed to enhance the educational opportunities of students and improve the quality of life for people who live and work in the neighborhoods near and around the center and Columbus’s urban communities.

AAAS COMMUNITY EXTENSION CENTER OFFERS

AFTER SCHOOL SCIENCE AND MATH PROGRAM
The extension center partners with OSU Medical Center (OSU East) to offer an after school program in math and science for students in grades 4-12. The program helps students develop competency in math and science, and strives to increase the applicant pool of students of color in math and science related careers.

SUMMER ENRICHMENT PROGRAM
Designed to provide rising high school freshman and sophomore students an appreciation for African American cultural and historical study, as well as computer instruction.

SENIOR MATINEE
Nearby churches and senior centers transport senior citizens to the center for lunch, a speaker, and a film.

ANNUAL VETERAN’S DAY CELEBRATION
The governor’s appointed COMMISSION ON AFRICAN AMERICAN MALES is housed at the center.

UNIQUE POINTS ABOUT THE DEPARTMENT
The department publishes two academic journals:
• Research in African Literatures
• Spectrum, a new journal about black men

AAAS multidisciplinary curriculum includes the most extensive offering of African languages (Swahili, Zulu, Twi, Somali and Yoruba) found at any university in the U.S.

The department conducts two study abroad programs — one in Ghana and one in South Africa.

It is also planning a new study abroad program to England to explore the Black British community there.

“Our department and others like it across the nation were born out of the self determination, intellectual curiosity, and struggle of African-descended people who believed that the study of Africa and the larger African diaspora is necessary for the intellectual development and social good of past, present, and future generations.”

(H. Ike Okafor-Newsum, Chair, AAAS)
